198 THE KNIGHT OF THE BLAZING CROSS

A manuscript poem by Flaxman, with a dedication to his wife on the anniversary of her birthday, Oct. 2nd, 1796, on 26 sheets, size 10 in. by 7 in., profusely illustrated with 41 exquisite groups of figures in pen; terminating with the "Acts of Mercy," 6 highly-finished drawings on 3 sheets, uniform with the above, being—

Instruct the Ignorant,
Feed the Hungry,
Clothe the Naked,
Comfort the Afflicted,
Visit the Sick,
Deliver the Captive.

The subject of the poem is thus epitomised in the Dedication to Ann Flaxman ("Nancy") :—

"Hail Wedded Love!

"The Anniversary of Your Birthday calls on me to be grateful for Fifteen Happy Years passed in Your Society: Accept the tribute of these Sketches, which were produced at your desire: under the Allegory of a Knight Errant's Adventures are indicated the Trials of Virtue and the Struggles and Conquest of Vice preparatory to a higher state of existence. After the Hero is exalted to the Spiritual World and blessed with a Celestial Union, he is armed with the power of the Elements for the exercise of his ministry: in the dispensations of Providence he becomes the Associate of Faith, Hope, and Charity, and his Universal Benevolence is employed in 'The Acts of Mercy.'"

This copy is referred to in Gilchrist's Life of Blake as "possessing a delicacy of feeling and freshness of execution often lost in the more laboured examples, especially in those finished after the artist's death by his widow." In a letter of Mr. Ruskin added to this copy, which was lent to him by Miss Denman, he says, "I had before the deepest respect for the genius of Blake—yet I was quite ignorant of his fine feeling for colour, which is one of the ruling and lovely qualities of these noble designs."
